OUR PURPOSE

Edinburgh Women's Aid's purpose is to meet the needs of women and children who are affected by domestic abuse, in any of its forms, perpetrated by a partner or ex-partner of either sex.

The principal aim of Edinburgh Women's Aid is to provide information, support, crisis counselling and, where appropriate, temporary accommodation, to women, children and young people who are affected by or at risk of domestic abuse. Edinburgh Women's Aid also aims to raise awareness of issues in relation to domestic abuse and to work with other organisations to develop strategies to address these issues.

We measure success in meeting our aims through:

- Measuring the number of women and children who use our range of services.
- Measuring refuge availability and occupancy to ensure our accommodation reaches those who need it.
- Measuring the number of women and children who indicate that things have improved for them on their support plan.
- Receiving scores of 'good' or above in our Care Inspectorate inspections.
- Receiving positive feedback on our reports from our funders.
- Positive feedback from women and children regarding their interaction with our services.

This report covers the period between 1 April 2025 and 31 March 2026.

LETTER FROM THE CHAIR

Welcome to our 2025-26 Impact Report.

We hope that this report will give you an idea of the wide range of services which Edinburgh Women's Aid provides to the women, children and young people in our city who have been affected by domestic abuse.

We are proud of our achievements in 2025/26 and very thankful for the ongoing funding we have received from The Scottish Government and The City of Edinburgh Council, as well as numerous trusts and grant-making organisations. Thank you for enabling us to provide crucial support services to the women and children who need them. We have also received enormous support from the local community and have benefitted from fundraising challenges, workplace charity initiatives and individual donations – we are so grateful to everyone who has supported us in some way.

None of this would be possible without the compassion, commitment and skill of our staff team and our Board members. I am extremely grateful to them all for their dedication over the last year. It is an honour and a privilege to serve as Chairperson of Edinburgh Women's Aid – a remarkable organisation staffed by women unwavering in their commitment to eliminate violence against women and children.

We look ahead with determination, committed to expanding our support and strengthening our impact across Edinburgh.

Kristine Steele

PLEASE CONSIDER SUPPORTING US

Edinburgh Women's Aid (EWA) is proud to be Edinburgh's leading charity in the fight against domestic abuse.

Our work is only possible through the generous donations of the public, businesses, and trusts. Demand continues to increase and it's more crucial than ever to expand our resources to meet the needs of the women and children in Edinburgh who are seeking refuge from the trauma of domestic abuse. With your help, we can ensure that more women and children become safe, recover, and rebuild their lives free from fear and harm.

If you are inspired by this report and would like to support us, we'd love to hear from you.

ACHIEVEMENTS AND PERFORMANCE

In 2025/26 Edinburgh Women's Aid offered the following services to women, young people and children:

TELEPHONE HELPLINE

Our crisis phone line was open from 10am to 3pm on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays; 10am to 7pm on Tuesdays; and 10am to 1pm on Saturdays. An answerphone picks up calls received outside of these hours and gives the number of the National Domestic Abuse and Forced Marriage Helpline, which operates 24 hours.

"I'm grateful for the acknowledgement and acceptance of everything I've been through. I feel seen. I had found it difficult to explain to others what was happening to me."

1:1 CRISIS SUPPORT

Our drop-in service, no appointment necessary, providing face to face support was available 10am to 3pm Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays; 10am to 7pm on Tuesdays; and 10am to 1pm on Saturdays.

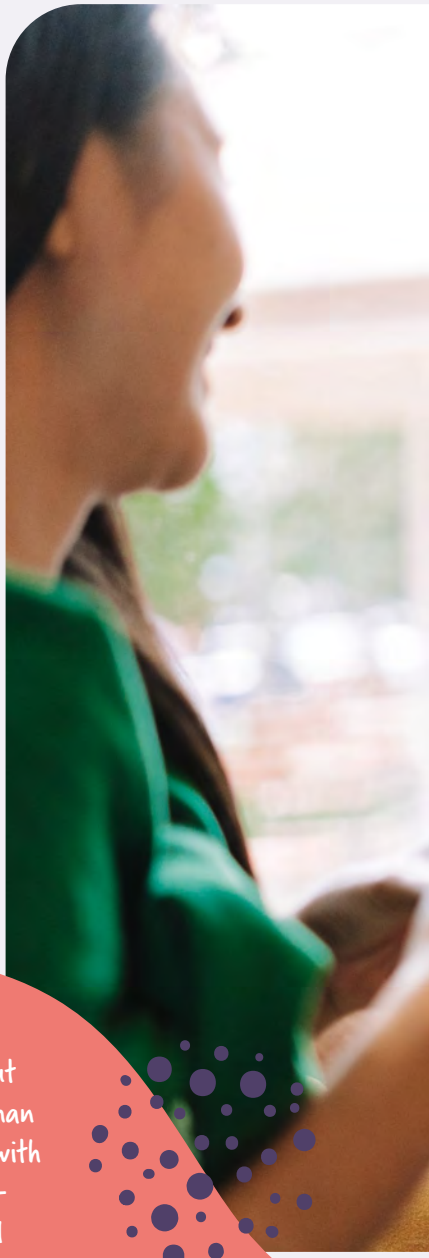

1031 women used our Women's Crisis Support Services in 2025/26, either by telephone or face to face; 969 of these were new to the service. These numbers almost match our 2024/25 numbers indicating a "new normal" of more than a thousand women per year using our crisis service.

"I am deeply grateful for how responsive you have been. Your quick reactions, clear communication, and genuine empathy really made a difference. I have been in a very challenging and difficult situation, and with your support, I feel I am not alone!"

LOCALITIES SUPPORT

Our localities support workers continued to provide support in their local areas.

This service is available by telephone, online and in face-to-face meetings, for women who need long-term ongoing support in their local area. The team work closely with locality partners such as housing, education, health and police.

245 women
received one to one support from a locality keyworker in 2025/26,

138 of whom were new to the service.

"I felt so much better just having a space to talk about my feelings. I have been able to go into more detail than I would with friends or family, because I was talking with a worker who understood my situation. Having a non-judgemental space was really helpful, and less stressful than talking to the police or other professionals."

REFUGE ACCOMMODATION

Where appropriate, Edinburgh Women's Aid offers safe, temporary accommodation to women and any accompanying children and young people who are homeless due to domestic abuse. Refuge accommodation provides a safe and supported place for women and their children to live when they flee domestic abuse.

There are two types of refuge available. Community refuges are where women live in safe properties around Edinburgh with support provided by staff visiting their accommodation. The second type of refuge is a purpose-built property with eight flats, an office, a community room and staff accommodation. This property is staffed 24/7 365 days per year. This year we expanded our community refuge offering by adding an additional accessible space to the refuge estate.

25 women and 32 children
found a safe place to stay in our community refuges in 2025/26

20 women and 12 children
stayed safely in our 24-hr refuge

"Good news! M signed the lease to her flat yesterday, and the resettlement team are on the case with grant applications for furnishings, etc. She also had her first meeting with her social worker last week, so everything is finally happening at once, which is great! Thank you for all the support along the way and please also pass my thanks to your fantastic team".

44 children stayed in refuge in 2025/26 and received specialist children's support while there, and after moving on if they wished. Edinburgh Women's Aid has always recognised the impact of domestic abuse on children and young people and provides support for them both in refuge and when moving on into permanent accommodation, to help them deal with recovery from abuse and with the changes within their family environment.

CASE STUDY
COMMUNITY REFUGE ACCOMMODATION

"I genuinely feel that support from my keyworker has made a significant difference to where I am now. When I first came into refuge, there were times when I just wanted to bury my head in the sand. There was so much happening at once from the children, contact, housing, finances, divorce, professionals, and trying to process everything that had happened that sometimes even thinking about the next thing I needed to deal with felt overwhelming. One of the things I have appreciated most about my keyworker is that she has never made me feel like I have to figure everything out at once.

She has supported me with navigating divorce and legal aid, finding practical and financial support, and making referrals to services when I have needed them. She has also thought about what support I might need further down the line, rather than only responding to whatever crisis is happening in that particular moment. We have talked about peer support, the MARDA service and what might be helpful for me once my current counselling finishes. That has meant a lot to me because I don't feel like I'm just being supported until I leave refuge and then left to work everything out on my own.

She has also been there for me around the issues of child contact. Some of the handovers have been really triggering and knowing that the keyworker was there whether through a phone call or one of her visits has made those moments feel much more manageable.

The Children's Planning meetings have been particularly important to me. When you are sitting in a room with a group of professionals talking about your life, it can sometimes feel like you are the only person there who actually has to live with the decisions and circumstances being discussed. Having my keyworker there has helped me feel that I am not alone in that room. She doesn't speak for me or make decisions on my behalf. Instead, she helps me find the confidence to voice my own thoughts and opinions. That distinction is really important to me. I have needed support to find my own voice, not somebody else's voice put over the top of mine.

I have also really valued the way my keyworker communicates with the other professionals involved in supporting me. Knowing that she keeps in contact with people such as my health visitor and the children's team means that I don't always have to start from the beginning and explain my whole situation again. It gives me a feeling of continuity when so many other things can feel uncertain.

My keyworker is very easy to talk to. I can be completely real with her. I can tell her when I'm angry, upset, confused, overwhelmed or when I don't really know what I'm feeling myself. At the same time, she remains professional. She can be warm and human without blurring that boundary, and that is quite a difficult balance to get right. She has also helped me start looking at the bigger picture of why certain things have happened in my life and what I want to do differently going forward. She has given me resources around attachment, co-dependency and boundaries because I have wanted to understand myself better, recognise early warning signs and feel more empowered. I don't want my experience to just be about what happened to me. I want to understand it, learn from it and make different choices for myself and my children in the future. She has supported me in that process without telling me what those choices should be and she has helped me trust myself again.

There have been times over the past year when I have wanted to shut everything out because facing everything felt too difficult. But through my keyworker's support, I have gradually become more able to recognise the things that need to be addressed and actually face them."

CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE

We provide an outreach service based in Edinburgh localities providing support to children and young people in their schools.

183 children received support through our outreach service in 2025/26, an increase of more than 40% on the previous year.

Child

"I'm really glad I had this support through all the big things that happened recently. I am now feeling more capable to face and deal with any smaller things that might happen in the future. I now feel confident that I can manage."

Young person

"I have never really shared like this with anyone before. I feel relieved now that I have managed to get it all out, and also proud of myself for seeking support."

Parent of a child receiving support

"Since you started supporting him, there have been no more bullying incidents at school. Not even once. I think this is because of his increased conflict resolution skills and confidence in saying no and setting boundaries that he has gained from his support. He has really been enjoying working with you and you have great skills in tailoring the support around his individual needs and interests."

YOUNG WOMEN AND GIRLS SERVICE

This year we launched our Young Women and Girls (YW&G) Service in response to growing numbers of girls of secondary school age approaching us concerned about abuse in their own and their friends' relationships.

We are increasingly also being approached by schools concerned about such abuse and uncertain of how to deal with the issue. Our project piloted in 2025/26 and continues in 2026/27 while we seek ongoing funding for this important work.

We worked with 41 young women and girls in our first year and built crucial relationships with a number of Edinburgh secondary schools.

CASE STUDY
YOUNG WOMEN AND GIRLS SERVICE

A young woman was referred to the Young Women and Girls Service after an unexpected encounter with someone who had previously subjected her to intimate partner abuse brought up unresolved distress. A professional supporting her made the initial contact with the service, after which our specialist young person's worker contacted the young woman directly.

When support began, she was feeling very anxious and emotionally overwhelmed, and she wanted to move forward with her life. She spoke about the fear and confusion she felt following the abuse and about feeling that her experiences had not been acknowledged. She wanted a safe space to talk, support to feel less anxious about possible future encounters, and help to make sense of what she had experienced.

The support worker offered a short programme of support tailored to her needs and what she hoped to achieve.

At review, the young woman said she had felt heard and listened to, without judgement. She was able to recognise that the sexual and emotional harm she had experienced was abuse. With support, she developed ways to manage trauma-related anxiety and began to rebuild a sense of choice and control in her life. She also felt clearer and more confident about her options for seeking justice in the future.

"Thank you for all your support. I feel good knowing that I can go to the police if I need to and that it wasn't my fault. I felt really listened to and not judged."

CHILDREN'S RIGHTS AND ADVOCACY SERVICE

Our Children's Rights and Advocacy Service works with children and young people who wish their voices to be heard in areas that affect their lives.

Often these are children affected by court interventions in their lives due to domestic abuse.

Our Children's Rights and Advocacy worker supported 46 children and young people in 2025/26.

CASE STUDY
CHILDREN'S RIGHTS AND ADVOCACY SERVICE

A child who had witnessed a serious offence against a parent was deeply afraid of seeing the accused during the court process. While discussing advocacy support with a family member, the child shared concerns about attending court and the family's safety.

The child was supported to choose and apply for special measures to feel safer while giving evidence:

- Remote access arrangements through court so the family could remain together in a safe setting.
- An advocacy worker present while the child gave evidence.
- A familiarisation visit before the hearing.

The Advocacy Worker arranged for the Procurator Fiscal to attend the court familiarisation visit. Meeting the person who might ask questions helped the child feel more at ease about the hearing.

Victim Support Scotland worker

"This was a really good idea! We never have had the prosecution attend court visits before, but this has been great. We need to keep this going. Look how comfortable he looks!"

Procurator Fiscal, Edinburgh Sheriff Court

"Thank you for organising this, and it was wonderful to meet you (child). See you soon."

MARDA

The MARDA (Mothers Aiding Recovery from Domestic Abuse) project supports mothers to support their children's recovery and to rebuild their relationship after abuse.

61 mothers completed MARDA programmes in 2025/26.

CASE STUDY
MARDA

A woman was afraid to report domestic abuse because she feared the consequences if the person causing harm found out. In a safe and supportive group setting, she felt validated and reassured that her experiences were real. Encouragement from other participants helped her feel able to report the abuse. She is now better able to recognise and respond to her child's emotions around family contact.

"I have learned lots of new techniques and coping mechanisms which have helped in my parenting in tough times, which has brought us closer."

EDDACS

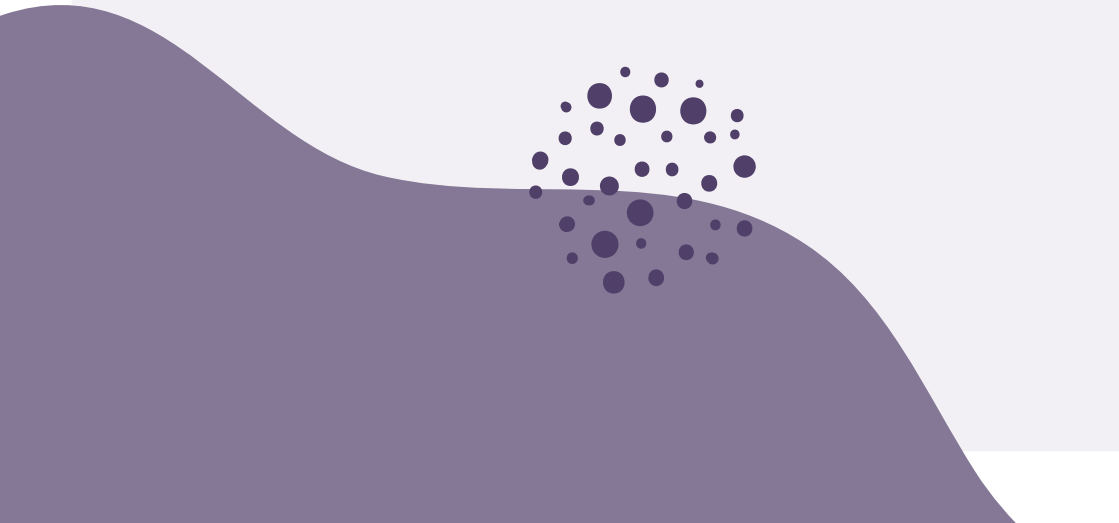

Our Edinburgh Domestic Abuse Court Service (EDDACS) provides support to women after police call-outs where the perpetrator has been taken into custody and enters the Edinburgh Domestic Abuse Court process.

This is an independent court support service that provides support and information to women at the earliest opportunity and also carries out a risk assessment and safety plan to identify interventions to reduce or manage risk.

728 women used the EDDACS service in 2025/26.

"You and your team have helped me navigate this (the court process). You are very empathic and understanding, you understand the sensitivity of the situation."

"Everybody is nervous about going to court, but I felt okay, I felt fine, better prepared."

COMPLEX NEEDS SERVICE

In the 2025/26 year, our complex needs services supported 49 women who were dealing with the additional health consequences of domestic abuse, such as mental ill health or substance misuse.

CASE STUDY
COMPLEX NEEDS SERVICE

A woman contacted EWA after leaving a long-term controlling and emotionally abusive relationship. She was in significant distress and had a history of serious mental-health difficulties. After separation, ongoing financial control and difficulties around family contact continued to affect her wellbeing. At the start of support, she felt emotionally numb and disconnected. Trauma-informed sessions focused on safety, self-worth and empowerment, helping her support her child through the family's transition.

She received coordinated, trauma-informed support and was connected with appropriate services, including MARDA, Civil Legal Support, Children and Young People support, Peer Support, mental-health services and Social Care Direct.

Her keyworker advocated with relevant professionals so that her concerns were heard and accompanied her during important appointments. She is now feeling better, reconnecting socially, enjoying time with her child and taking positive steps towards a safer and more secure future.

"Thank you for all of your support, I'm coping fine, I'm still processing and coming to terms with things, but feeling so much stronger".

HOUSING POLICY PROJECT

Launched in February 2024, with funding from Nationwide Building Society, this project aims to improve policy implementation, prevent homelessness and enhance housing options for women affected by domestic abuse.

85 women were supported through this service in 2025/26.

CASE STUDY
HOUSING POLICY PROJECT

A family was advised by Police Scotland to relocate because of serious safety concerns. They also had significant health and additional support needs, including a child who relied on routine and consistent support. The woman sought help to secure alternative accommodation and was referred to the Housing Policy service. Through coordinated work between the Housing Policy Officer and the City of Edinburgh Council's Access to Housing team, the family was offered a suitable home outside their preferred area. Accepting it was difficult because moving could disrupt the children's schooling and established support.

Over time, the woman became more hopeful, and the new house began to feel like home. She also felt much safer knowing the person causing harm did not know where the family lived.

"I appreciated having the Housing Policy officer support me at meetings when I was feeling overwhelmed and anxious and I'm so grateful for the advocacy that ended up in me receiving an offer of housing".

WORKS 4 WOMEN PROJECT

This project provides employability support through groupwork and 1:1 individualised support to women from Edinburgh Women's Aid and Shakti Women's Aid.

74 women engaged with our Works 4 Women project in 2025/26.

CASE STUDY
WORKS FOR WOMEN

When a woman joined the Works 4 Women project, her self-esteem was very low after experiencing long-term domestic abuse. She took part in group sessions and employability training to rebuild her confidence. She then began volunteering and received support to complete a relevant qualification. She also accessed one-to-one financial coaching and was connected with Business Gateway and Enterprise Nation to explore self-employment.

"I am now working with Business Gateway as I start building my own business and I'm volunteering four days a week. These are hopeful and healing steps for me. When I first came to you, I was carrying years of hurt and exhaustion. I felt lost in a darkness I didn't know how to escape. You met me with patience and kindness and helped me find my way back to myself. You reminded me of strengths I thought were gone. You helped me rebuild confidence, dignity, and a sense of direction. Please know how deeply grateful I am. You didn't just support me. You helped give me my life back. That gratitude will stay with me always."

PEER SUPPORT SERVICE

This service aims to build confidence in women who have used our services and who are looking to move forward with their lives.

35 women attended peer support sessions in 2025/26.

CASE STUDY
PEER SUPPORT SERVICE

A participant described the Personal Safety session as life changing. Although challenging at times, it helped her feel more empowered and confident about protecting herself. She also valued seeing facilitators with relevant lived experience.

"Being a part of this group and sharing insight, experiences, feelings with these beautiful ladies along with all the self-reflection activities has been very helpful and motivating in feeling not alone, understood, accepted, and learning about the importance of boundaries, self-esteem, and doing positive things that make me feel more in control."

THE CIVIL LEGAL SUPPORT SERVICE

This is a vital partnership between Scottish Women's Aid (SWA), Edinburgh Women's Aid (EWA), and Baker Gostelow Family Law.

This collaboration is designed to provide rapid and accessible legal advice, interventions, and services to women and children affected by domestic abuse, addressing a critical gap in existing support structures.

602 women were referred for specialist legal assistance in the year 2025/26.

"Having this support made a massive difference. It gave me the confidence I needed to go to court unrepresented, ensuring I felt thoroughly prepared and significantly less anxious about the whole experience. Following the court appearance, I provided her (solicitor) with feedback and she has kindly offered me further support moving forward."

INVOLVEMENT IN PARTNERSHIP FORUMS

Edinburgh Women's Aid is an active contributor to many partnership forums. We know that the issues around domestic abuse cannot be addressed unless all agencies take them into consideration.

ESEC

EWA chairs the Equally Safe (Edinburgh) Committee (previously known as Edinburgh Violence against Women Partnership).

MARAC

EWA is the coordinating agency and co-chair for Edinburgh MARAC (Multi-Agency Risk Assessment Conference) which hears high risk cases of domestic abuse. 13 MARACs were held in Edinburgh in 2025/26.

MATAC

EWA is a partner in the multi-agency tasking and coordinating (MATAC) meetings, which are coordinated by Police Scotland with the aim of holding high tariff perpetrators to account. In 2025/26 we took part in all 13 Edinburgh MATAC meetings sharing information to support the safety of women and their children.

DSDAS

Edinburgh Women's Aid continues to work with Police Scotland, local authorities and NHS partners through the Disclosure Scheme for Domestic Abuse Scotland (DSDAS). The partners meet weekly at decision-making forums to consider whether someone's history of domestic abuse should be disclosed to a new partner. In 2025, 52 forums were held, resulting in decisions to disclose previous abuse in hundreds of applications.

APPLIED RESEARCH

We aim to strengthen relationships with colleges, universities and third sector agencies. In this financial year we hosted counselling placements from the University of Edinburgh and a placement from Napier

University. We continued with our strategic commitment to raising the voices of women and children affected by domestic abuse through our participation in applied research.

Our first PhD studentship, which looks at the Edinburgh MARAC, was in partnership with the University of Edinburgh Social Work department and progressed successfully into its final months. Writing the final draft ran through the last quarter of 2025/26. The Doctorate was awarded in July 2026.

Our second PhD partnership started in Autumn 2025 and will work alongside our Young Women and Girls Project researching the growing evidence of intimate partner violence in young peer relationships.

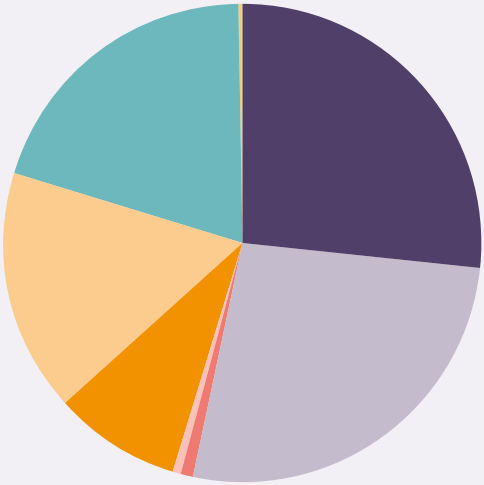

This year, we continued our participation in a range of Scottish Government research, working groups and consultations including into Economic Abuse; the review of MARAC nationally; and the interface between Civil and Criminal Justice in cases of domestic abuse.

In September 2025, we joined the University of Edinburgh and international partners to present research on domestic abuse shelters at the European Conference on Domestic Violence. Our presentation focussed on research partnerships between the third sector and universities to support and embed evidence-based practice.

YOUTH & PHILANTHROPY INITIATIVE

EWA also engaged with young people through the Youth & Philanthropy Initiative (YPI) in 16 schools by providing information sessions to school pupils across Edinburgh. These sessions empowered students to educate their peers and school staff on domestic abuse, fostering a deeper understanding of the issue. Three groups of school students won the prize for the best presentation, raising £3,000 each time for our services.
